O. , Congressional Sales Office, 2001. OCLC Number: (OCoLC)48418890 Subject: Consumer protection -- United States. Excerpt: . . . 11 CHUMER Senator S. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the opportunity to make a statement. I am in the Banking Committee and here on two issues I care about, so I will be shuttling back and forth the whole morning. Mr. Chairman, lets face it, we are in a brave new world. In 1993, there were 13 non-government sites on the World Wide Web. Today, there are 14 million. And as the Web has mushroomed, Internet crime has quickly and quietly become a clear and present danger to our national security, our economy, and all our lives. In 1996, the cost of Internet crime was about 100 million. In 1998, the number tripled, and now a single computer virus, the I Love You virus, can cause on its own financial losses in the bil-lions. The denial of service attacks a few months ago and the I Love You virus show how easy it is to cripple the most prized com-puter networks around the globe, and how helpless law enforce-ment can be in catching those responsible. Up to now, it seems those who have caused damage are doing it almost for sport. What is going to happen when someone with far more nefarious purposes starts to do this Mr. Chairman, there are multiple causes of this problem. First, most computer systems are not sufficiently secure, and security was usually a relatively low priority in the development of computer software and Internet systems. Second, hacking is still con-sidered...
