Physical education is not merely an aid to health and mental effectiveness; physical poise and competence in sports engender mental and social poise and self-confidence, and are among the fundamental bases of that instructive capacity for leadership which is all-important in a naval officer. The Naval Academy cannot attach too much importance to the physical development of its midshipmen. For these reasons the Board regrets to learn that the appropriation for the Academy provides for less than a third of the instructing staff in physical education deemed necessary by the Academic Board, and that a considerable part of the expense of carrying this essential part of the curriculum has to be provided from what are properly private funds supplied by the Athletic Association. The Board recommends to the Navy Department and to the Congress that adequate instruction in physical education be provided for in the regular appropriation. If this were done the Athletic Association might be able to help in the provision of some of the athletic facilities badly needed by the teams of the Academy, a use of its funds much more appropriate than that now found necessary. 8. For both the reasons discussed above, the Board feels that more land is urgently needed. Of the half-dozen or more possibilities considered by the Board the most immediately urgent and practicable seems to be the acquisition of some forty-six acres lying to the west-of Dorsey Creek, south of and immediately adjacent to...
