Mjj is joined with the participle when it is used in a conditional sense (614). Otherwise ov is used. 483. O v is often used in close connection with a single word, when the negation really belongs to another word in the sentence. OA friftl = nego. 484. When a negative sentence contains indefinite pronouns or adverbs, these are generally expressed by compounds of the same negative as belongs to the sentence. This repetition of negatives does not render the sentence affirmative, but rather makes the negative force pervade the whole of it. 485. Oi ft!) are used together to express a strong negation with the subjuncti ve (generally aorist), or a strong prohibition with the future indicative. The former use is often explained by understanding between the two negations some expression of fear or anxiety. Ovkgti ft)) iCvr/rat fiaoikebs...
