I wrung out pieces of wet rag in cold water, and Sandie laid them on his forehead, removing them the moment they felt heated. I doubt not it was that fellow Stevens who sent the puir boy aloft, for I heard him bullying some one, and I wish I had gone on deck to see what it was. He might as well have ordered a baby up the rigging as that know-naething child. He might ha thocht his head would spin round, and get giddy, and that he would come down to the deck quicker than he went up. I wonder he hadna fallen into the sea; it was just God s good providence that kept him from that end. Ah! Mr. Stevens, if I had the setting of you I d masthead you till the...
