Not illustrated. 1877 Excerpt: .had the pleasure of seeing the conical roofs of the houses of Soog Abou Sin, as it is sometimes called, rising before us. I had heard that there was a Greek merchant living at Katarif; and, as in Africa hospitality from one white man to another is a matter of course, I enquired my way to his dwelling, and without further ceremony made my camels kneel at his door, and walked into the hut, where I received a very kind welcome. Katarif, or the market of Abou Sin, is situated on the border of immense prairies, which, in the rainy season, are covered with long grass, but at this time of the year, after being exposed for eight months to a burning sun, were an arid and waterless desert. I was told that, for three days march, we should find no water on the road; and was therefore anxious to obtain another camel, to carry a supply of water and corn; but it was no easy task to get away from Katarif. Soog means market. As yet I had been unable to procure any waterskins; and here, after much trouble, I could only get some old ones that were scarcely water-tight. The Sheik also sent word that he could not let me have a camel for two or three days; and even the Greek merchant, with whom I was lodged, declared it was hopeless for me to try to get away sooner. What did it matter?...
